SOS Waterfront lifejackets are certified to the international standard ISO 12402.

Our capabilities are aligned with the current and future needs of customers' modernisation options. SOS Marine has built strong relationships with some of the world's leading component suppliers, allowing us to provide a large range of variations of quality designed products with 'outside-the-square' thinking.

SOS Marine developed, patented and commercialised two new revolutionary man-overboard products for both the search and rescue and the leisure markets.

The multiple award winning SOS Dan Buoy and the Sea Scoopa provide a more effective way to respond to a man-overboard situation.

Both these innovations have new capabilities that provide higher performance, durability and functionality for every boat, with pioneering ways to respond to an emergency situation: advantages for both the rescue teams and the person overboard.

For over 30 years, SOS Marine's reliable performance has confirmed our reputation for designing innovative products that meet maritime safety challenges, from water rescue to high risk marine tactical operations.
